APPLICATION FOR NEW COURSE

1. Submitted by the College of Arts and Sciences Date: 9/4/2009
Department/Division proposing course: English

2. Proposed designation and Bulletin description of this course:
   a. Prefix and Number ENG 518
   b. Title* Advanced History of the English Language
      *If title is longer than 24 characters, offer a sensible title of 24 characters or less: ADV HIS OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE

   c. Courses must be described by at least one of the categories below. Include number of actual contact hours per week.
      (___) CLINICAL (___) COLLOQUIUM (___) DISCUSSION (___) LABORATORY (___) LECTURE
      (___) INDEPEND. STUDY (___) PRACTICUM (___) RECITATION (___) RESEARCH (___) RESIDENCY
      (___) SEMINAR (___) STUDIO (___) OTHER – Please explain: ______________________________________

   d. Please choose a grading system: ☒ Letter (A, B, C, etc.) ☐ Pass/Fail

   e. Number of credit hours: 3

   f. Is this course repeatable? YES ☐ NO ☒ If YES, maximum number of credit hours: __________

   g. Course description:
      This course explores the development of English from its roots in Indo-European, through Old, Middle, and Early Modern English(es), culminating with a review of the English languages of today. It focuses on the phonological, grammatical, and lexical changes of the language, as well as on the social contexts of the rise and spread of English as a contemporary world language. Special emphasis is given to a linguistically informed understanding of how the language has changed in response to political and historical pressures.

   h. Prerequisite(s), if any: __________________________________________________

   i. Will this course also be offered through Distance Learning? YES ☐ NO ☒
      If YES, please check one of the methods below that reflects how the majority of the course content will be delivered:
      Internet/Web-based ☐ Interactive video ☐ Extended campus ☐

3. Supplementary teaching component: ☒ N/A or ☐ Community-Based Experience ☐ Service Learning ☐ Both

4. To be cross-listed as: LIN 518 Greg Stump
   Prefix and Number printed name Cross-listing Department Chair signature
APPLICATION FOR NEW COURSE

5. Requested effective date (term/year): Spring / 2010

6. Course to be offered (please check all that apply): ☒ Fall ☒ Spring ☐ Summer

7. Will the course be offered every year? ☐ YES ☒ NO
   If NO, please explain: The course will be offered once every two years.

8. Why is this course needed?
   ENG 518 is needed for several reasons: 1) as an advanced continuation of ENG 210, for undergraduate English majors interested in studying the History of the English Language (HOTEL) in greater detail; 2) as a resource for English graduate students who need an advanced HOTEL for both research background and for teaching; 3) as a bridge between the broader and more general HOTEL class already taught in ENG 210 and the more linguistically focused courses already offered (LIN 317, ENG/LIN 512, ENG/LIN 513, ENG/LIN/ANT 515); and 4) as the proper forum for covering the historiography and impact of language study and English philology as a subject of intellectual history.

9. a. By whom will the course be taught? Matthew Giancarlo
   b. Are facilities for teaching the course now available? ☒ YES ☐ NO
      If NO, what plans have been made for providing them?

10. What yearly enrollment may be reasonably anticipated?
    15

11. a. Will this course serve students primarily within the department? ☒ Yes ☐ No
    b. Will it be of interest to a significant number of students outside the department?
       ☒ YES ☐ NO
       If YES, please explain.
       Linguistics and education students may be interested in this class; it also has elements important to social and intellectual history

12. Will the course serve as a University Studies Program course? ☐ YES ☒ NO
    If YES, under what Area?
    †AS OF SPRING 2007, THERE IS A MORATORIUM ON APPROVAL OF NEW COURSES FOR USP.

13. Check the category most applicable to this course:
    ☒ traditional – offered in corresponding departments at universities elsewhere
    ☐ relatively new – now being widely established
    ☐ not yet to be found in many (or any) other universities

14. Is this course applicable to the requirements for at least one degree or certificate at UK? ☒ Yes ☐ No

15. Is this course part of a proposed new program? ☐ YES ☒ NO
APPLICATION FOR NEW COURSE

If YES, please name: ____________________________________________________________

16. Will adding this course change the degree requirements for ANY program on campus?
   If YES1, list below the programs that will require this course:
   □ YES  □ NO

   1In order to change the program(s), a program change form(s) must also be submitted.

17. □ The major teaching objectives of the proposed course, syllabus and/or reference list to be used are attached.

   18. □ Check box if course is 400G- or 500-level, you must include a syllabus showing differentiation for undergraduate and graduate students by (i) requiring additional assignments by the graduate students; and/or (ii) the establishment of different grading criteria in the course for graduate students. (See SR 3.1.4)

   19. Within the department, who should be contacted for further information about the proposed new course?

Overview:
This course provides a comprehensive overview of English from its nascent roots in the Proto Indo-European language family, through its developments in Common and North West Germanic, Old English, Middle English, Early Modern English, and up to the present day. Through a combination of lectures, textbook readings, discussions, and independent research, participants in this seminar will come away with a working exposure to all stages of English’s historical development. We will also consider the significance of the development of contemporary English languages, as English now stands as the first truly world language—or melange of languages—with an unprecedented global reach.

Textbooks:
There are two required books:
- additional photocopy handouts distributed during class

Goals and grades:
The goals of this seminar are: 1) to introduce some of the linguistic fundamentals of language study; 2) to provide an in-depth linguistic review of the history of the English language; 3) to study the development of English specifically in the literary tradition and in the social history of different periods; and 4) to consider the significance of English as a world language today and in the foreseeable future.

This is the grade percentage breakdown for undergraduate and graduate students:

Grades are calculated along a standard 100% scale: 90-100% = A; 80-89% = B; 70-79% = C; 60-69% = D (E for graduate students): 59% and below = E. Mid-term Evaluations will be posted by Week 9 (3/8). This will include everything completed up to that point (homeworks 1-3; mid-term exam; attendance.)

Attendance will be recorded for every class meeting. Two unexcused absences will be allowed without penalty. After that, each absence will incur a 10% reduction in the attendance grade. Excused absences will be given at instructor’s discretion only with proof of conflict with a university sponsored activity or with proof of illness.

Appropriate classroom behavior, participation, and civility will be expected at all times.
The homework exercises will be distributed 5 times in the term and submitted in class. Homework unsubmitted by the deadlines will not be accepted, nor can it be made up. The mid-term exam will be taken in class during the 8th week and will cover everything up to the eighth week of the course. The mid-term can only be taken on the day scheduled. The final exam will cover the entire course; date, time and location: TBD. The graduate research project will be an independent piece of work, determined in consultation with the instructor, that covers some subject or text of particular interest to the graduate seminar participants. Possible subjects for individual research could include, for example, extended etymological research on English language history or language contact; a linguistic analysis of a particular text or selection of texts; an investigation of a particular historical language trait or historiographical issue; research into English language dictionaries; research into language attitudes; or something else. Whatever your topic, it needs to demonstrate graduate level research and critical inquiry into the History of English.

Policy on Academic Accommodations due to disability: If you have a documented disability that requires academic accommodations, please see me as soon as possible during scheduled office hours. In order to receive accommodations in this course, you must provide me with a Letter of Accommodation from the Disability Resource Center (Room 2, Alumni Gym, 257-2754, email address jkarnes@eaml.unc.edu) for coordination of campus disability services available to students with disabilities.

Academic Integrity: All assignments, projects, and exercises completed by students for this class should be the product of the personal efforts of the individual(s) whose name(s) appear on the corresponding assignment. Misrepresenting others' work as one's own in the form of cheating or plagiarism is unethical and will lead to those penalties outlined in the University Senate Rules (6.3.1 & 6.3.2) at the following website: http://www.uky.edu/USC/New/rules_regulations/index.htm. The Ombud site also has information on plagiarism found at http://www.uky.edu/Ombud.

Hi Mitch,

David Hunter sent us your query regarding the proposed re-creation of ENG/LIN 518, ADVANCED NOVEL. Here's the situation in a nutshell:

As you know, 518 has been removed as a required graduate course in our department. I was not consulted on this matter before it was voted on, but I assumed to the graduate Committee's recommendation. Because of this, and given the kinds of graduate students we attract, 518 is highly unlikely to make the necessary enrollment to survive completely on its own as a 600-level graduate seminar; at least not in the near future. Nonetheless, there are a few grad students who would greatly benefit from a NOVEL course and who have in fact requested it (about 2-4 grad students).

ENG/LIN 210 is a successful course that serves a well-defined student constituency. It is also a low-level and entirely narrative, with almost no philological or linguistic content. So the instructor Mike O'Hara tells me himself. It is not appropriate either for grad students or for our advanced majors in literature and linguistics.

NOVEL is an active research and teaching interest of mine. I publish in it, and I was recruited and hired by UK in part to teach it.

So, the obvious solution is to bring back NOVEL at the 500-level, where it can be advanced and rigorous enough to act as an undergraduate major seminar -- which we need more of -- and as a graduate seminar. The syllabus design respects this dual constituency, I am confident that at this level it will easily make enrollment. (It will be drawing from undergrad like 518, plus constitute as well as from interested grad students.) Such a class would in fact be closer to the kind of NOVEL class I taught many times successfully at Yale.

I don't know about the history of ENG 518/618 since I joined the faculty only recently. I cannot speculate on the motivation for removing it, if that is what happened. (In fact when 518 was de-required last year and I was asked about teaching it at the 500 level, Tom seemed to think that 518 was still on the books. I assume it had something to do with R. Kinnear's well-known reluctance to 'teach down' his subject of expertise to undergrads. I have no such qualms, and I am excited by the prospect of teaching our majors with the course. New cases calls for new course), and I think it is also fair to say that the faculty concerns prevailing during Kinnear's time no longer obtain today. I can not afford to be so selective if I wish to teach in my area of expertise.

As for making 210 a pre-requisite, I understand the suggestion but I am reluctant to do so. I have not met most of our undergrads who would do fine in an Advanced NOVEL course without having taken ENG/LIN 210. (It's not like moving from Algebra I to Algebra II). Actually I just planned on including a warning in the course description that 518 is not a substitute for 210, and that it is advanced, i.e., intended for junior/senior majors - grad students. I have talked this over extensively with Tom and Garry, and they are in agreement with the course's focus and constituency. Perhaps if I run into trouble we could re-consider this?

As for removing 210, I see no reason to do so. Why not just leave it on the books? I have no idea if it will ever be taught again. But who knows? Is there some administrative advantage (or requirement) for removing it? If not, why not just leave the option open for me or whoever else might carry along? Given the liveliness of our linguists, I could envision a day when one of them might want to teach English 618 NOVEL with a specific seminar focus. That seems a more legitimate use of the 600-level number anyway.

Please let me know what you think, or if I can clarify further.

Many thanks,

Paul

Fact,

One of the committee members posed a question regarding the relation between the proposed ENG 518 and the existing ENG 419 (see below). Can you offer any clarification on this?

Thanks,

David

David--

Since the new course is proposed 'as a resource for English graduate students who need an advanced NOVEL for both research background and for teaching,' and since there already exists ENG 618,

ENG 618 HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. (3)

An intensive study of the change of English from a synthetic to an analytic language, from its origin in Indo-European to its current stage of development. Emphasis is on change in phonology, morphology, syntax, and semantics, from Old to Early-Modern English.

... a NOVEL course for graduate students, shouldn't there be a statement in the application dealing with this apparent duplication? Does English seek to replace ENG 618 with ENG 518? Will it ever teach 618 again?

Curiously, there used to be an ENG 518, History of the English Language, but the then-instructor successfully proposed to split it into an undergraduate and a graduate version, because he found the combination of...
